SERGEANT MILTON BISHOP'S DEATH GREAT LOSS TO THE BOYS OF COMPANY D, 110TH

The boys of Company D, 110th Infantry, have been unanimous in expressions of their regard for Sergeant Milton Bishop, who was among the first of the boys of this unit to yield up his life on the battlefields of France. In letters that have reached Connellsville frequent mention has been made of the regret felt in the ranks of Company D at his untimely end. In a letter dated October 23, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Easton of Trevor street, Corporal Joseph W. Easton of Company D, says:

"Sergeant Bishop was a swell fellow and we all lost a great friend when we lost him."

Corporal Easton reports that he is recovering from his wound, saying that "it won't be long before I am able to be about again just like I used to be."

Referring to the death in action of Private Patrick Cook of Company D, Corporal Easton says that "it was a great loss to the company, but believe me, we put all the more vigor into the next fray and we did not let principles and fair play hamper our fighting contest. It's a great life, as the poet says, and in this case we will not weaken."

"The night those fellows went West we had come back from a battle (July 30) when we made a big gain. While we were resting behind the lines the Boches dropped a few bombs on us. Believe me, it was real hell for a while, and to see the condition of the poor fellows who were hit was awful."

K. and just as happy as ever."

Williams says writing letters at the front is difficult and asks his mother to excuse "bad writing." "If it were not for the Y. M. C. A. I don't know what one would do. You would be out of luck, I guess." The letter was written September 20.

DR. SCHAEFFER IS IN FAVOR OF PLAN TO SHORTEN TERM

State Superintendent of Public Instruction So Informs County Head.

TEACHERS WOULD BE PAID

In Full, for Service, Including the Time Lost Because of Influenza Epidemic; Objection Raised to Extending School Into Harvest Season.

County Superintendent of Schools J. S. Carroll has been in communication with Nathan C. Schaeffer, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, asking that it be recommended at the next session of the legislature to have the schools closed at the original time, with pay to teachers for the full time lost.

Superintendent Carroll reports that Dr. Schaeffer is heartily in favor of the suggestion and believes it will carry when put before the legislature.

If the resolution should be approved by the next legislature it means that the schools would close at the end of the regular term instead of continuing for several weeks to make up the time lost on account of the influenza epidemic.

Some school boards have been paying their teachers during the idle period, but others have not. To some teachers the loss of salary would prove embarrassing and for this reason it has been suggested that they be paid for the lost time, instead of continuing school for an extra month.

There are two arguments advanced in favor of closing the schools as had been originally planned.

First, it is contended that after the regular time for closing has been reached, the work on the part of the students lag, and they do not derive full benefit of their studies.

Second, it is claimed the assistance of the students, both both male and female, is necessary in farm work and they must be dismissed at the regular time to do this. Many students are employed on farms during the vacation months.

If the schools were to be continued, the end of one term would almost run into the opening of the next, which would prove very unsatisfactory.

The men will be brought from all parts of the system. In order to assist the railroad company, Mayor Duggan is paying a visit to all the railroads in the city. Persons knowing places available are urged to notify the City Executive.

As soon as the necessary houses can be located the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company will bring 25 or more expert machinists to this city to work in the shops. This will mean the employment of at least 100 additional men as helpers and other necessary workers as assistants to the machinists.

The men will be brought from all parts of the system. In order to assist the railroad company, Mayor Duggan is paying a visit to all the railroads in the city. Persons knowing places available are urged to notify the City Executive.

Where was the location of the famous Twenty-eighth Division, the Keystone Division from Pennsylvania, at the time the war ceased?

It is away too early, yet, for letters to have come from the division telling of what occurred last Monday morning, when the end of the battle came, says the Latrobe Bulletin.

But from the dispatches which have been coming through from correspondents giving their accounts of the closing hours of the grim struggle, the inference would seem to be that when the war came to an end, the Twenty-eighth occupied muddy trenches in the swampy country near St. Mihiel.

The men waited an hour, following the cessation of fighting, in compliance with orders, then many of them scurried out into No Man's Land for a celebration, while the Boche approached timidly from the other side.

The Eighteenth Division, from Camp Lee, was in rest billets near Varennes, and the men shot off all the rockets they had in celebrating.

It will be weeks before it will have been told how all along the line there was celebrating, with many different manifestations of the joy that was felt over the victory.

COAL PRODUCTION KEPT ON DOWNWARD GRADE WEEK OF NOV. 2

The Total Was 104,65,000 Tons, or Three Per Cent. Lower than the Preceding Week.

The production of bituminous coal during the week of November 2, as in the preceding four weeks, continued on the downward grade, estimates placing the output, including lignite and coal made into coke, at 10,965,000 net tons, a decrease compared with the preceding week of three per cent and but six per cent over the corresponding week of 1917. The average production per working day during the week is estimated at 1,528,000 net tons, as against 1,585,000 net tons during the week of October 26 and 1,586,000 net tons during the week of November 2 of last year.

This is the nearest approach to the level of 1917 since last February and indicates that, unless production soon increases, the probability of a shortage, largely overcome by the record-breaking output of the past few months, will again be before the country. The epidemic of influenza still continues in some of the fields and to this, together with the unexpected warm weather generally, is attributed a temporary lull in the production and transportation of coal and in the previous strenuous industrial demand.

The production of bituminous coal from April 1 to date is 368,858,000 net tons as against 326,421,000 net tons in 1917, an increase of 11,437,000 net tons or 13 per cent.

Antracite production continued to fall during the week of November 2, estimates placing the output at 1,500,000 net tons as compared with 1,714,000 net tons during the week preceding, a decrease of 21,000 net tons or 12.5 per cent.

IGNATIUS FRIEL WRITES

Member of Headquarters Company, 319th Tells of Big Battle.

The following is part of a letter written by Ignatius Friel of Headquarters Company, of the 319th Infantry, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Friel, York avenue, October 21:

"Our division went into action last week and did great work, holding up their end in great shape, gaining their objective within the specified time and also holding it. My old company, that is the one I was in before being transferred, certainly went through in great shape, but it lost quite a few men, among the number being some of my best friends. In fact they were just like brothers to me. But such is war. Someone has to pay the toll. I could tell you a great deal about the battle but it would be a waste of time. Probably in a week or so I can write all about it, but we are under more restrictions as regards telling out whereabouts and doings than the company from home."

You have often heard what good sliders some of the great baseball players are, but they have nothing on us when it comes to sliding into ditches and dodging shrapnel and I tell you we have to do it quite often these days as the Hunns have been doing shells over thick and fast at times. Back home we used to go for miles to see an aeroplane do a few stunts, but now we see them go through all kinds of maneuvers, but we see them so often we don't give them a second thought. One night while in dugouts up near the line we were all sitting around waiting our call to go on duty when some came down and threw three packages to us, saying: 'Boys, there's a few papers you can read.' So we all made a scramble for them and I was lucky enough to get one and what do you think they were?—the old Couriers of August 6, 7 and 9, and say I wasn't glad to get to read some news from the old coke city."

THE MEASURE OF OUR GENEROSITY AND OUR DUTY.

While there rests upon the United States the obligation as a Christian nation to join in providing relief for suffering and distressed people everywhere, in considering our duty to the people of Germany we must not permit an effusive generosity or overwrought sympathy to be the controlling factors moving us to action.

We recognize our obligation to make no distinctions in the ministrations of our charity, need alone being the measure of our bounty whomsoever may be the beneficiary. But there are some things other than sentiment that we must consider in answering the appeal for succor that comes from Germany at this time. We must remember that the necessities of the peoples of the countries with which we were allied in the war have the first call upon us. Our disposition to be generous to Germany must not blind us to the fact that there remain millions of half-starved and impoverished men, women and children whose untold hardships during more than four long years of the war it is our most solemn duty to mitigate as quickly and as completely as possible. Vast areas of Belgium, France, Italy, Serbia, Rumania, Armenia and Syria have been made barren and desolate by the withering blight of the armies of the Hun and his allies and the inhabitants subjected to studied cruelty and barbarity. Mean-time Germany has escaped all these horrifying ravages of war and its people have been unmolested in their pursuits save only as their own authorities have made excessive wartime demands upon their energies and resources.

To the unfortunate in the countries of our Allies our bounty must flow in an unceasing stream until they have regained sufficient strength to resume the activities of peace and are able to provide for themselves, but in extending relief to Germany we are under no obligation to make it a philanthropy. For the condition in which they find themselves they alone are responsible as they, through their army and their rulers, are responsible for the heinous distresses the people of the Allied countries have been forced to endure.

For every pound of food we send to Germany she should be required to pay. While she as a nation is virtually bankrupt, there is still great wealth among German banks and German profiteers who grew rich out of the miseries the war brought to innocent sufferers. Let them pay as part of the expiation Germany must make for the boundless sins she, through her war-mad rulers, has committed. In the case of Germany being willing to sell her food is sufficient measure of our generosity. In the case of the prostrate people of the Allies supplying their needs to the utmost should be the measure of our duty.

MUST STILL CONSERVE FOOD

Because of the easement that has come along certain lines with the near approach of peace, many persons are apt to think they can throw off all the restraint we practiced during the war. Particularly is this true in respect to the saving of food. We must remember, however, that conditions relating to the world's supply of food have not changed except to require that the United States ship more rather than less to the European countries.

The signing of the armistice does not add a pound to the world's supply, but it does add millions of half-starved people in the war-stricken countries to the number of those who will be dependent upon our willingness to share with them. In view of this fact conservation of food by the people of America is even a more vital duty now than it was before the changing tide of war transformed millions of enemies into virtual prisoners in our care as jailer. Under the circumstances it will probably be months, at least until after another seedtime and harvest in Europe—before the principles if not also the actual application of food control can be done away with. Meantime the hungry people of Europe will look to us for sustenance. Their wants, more acute than we can ever know, will not be satisfied even in part if we do not eliminate waste in our homes and limit our consumption of food so that, while having all we require, there will be plenty to divide for humanity's sake.

Before the armistice was signed, our government had undertaken to send to Europe 17,500,000 tons of food-stuffs, a quantity greatly in excess of that sent over during the past year. With the new demands arising from a conclusion of hostilities, it is estimated that 5,000,000 tons additional will be required for the starving people of Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey; and the total, exclusive of any we may furnish to Germany, may possibly reach 25,000,000 tons.

These are staggering figures, but to furnish this enormous quantity of food represents a duty the people of the United States must perform if we hope to retain that esteem and regard in which our country is held for the magnificent record we have made in giving succor to those distressed to helplessness and want during the progress of the war. We cannot perform that duty if, out of our bountiful store of food, we now begin to selfishly consume or unnecessarily waste that which we have already learned can be conserved and divided among those who have not.

We have been expecting many changes to come with the end of the war, but the suggestion by Democratic members of Congress that economy in public expenditures be made the rule is so startling that it finds the public wholly unprepared to receive it.

If the school authorities are in doubt what to do about the proposed shortening of the school term they might take a referendum vote among the boys.

The question of the hour, "When will Johnny come marching home?"

If the merchants take on more help for the holiday season that will be no excuse for you to delay your buying.

The ex-Kaiser's name no longer features the headlines.

Of course you realize the obligation to conclude the week's peace celebration by attendance at church tomorrow.

THE FIRST PLOW.

Old Tubal Cain was badly boozed by all the wrangles of his day; he made a plowshare of a sword, and thought that war was done away. "Gee whiz," said, "when people see how much a plowshare beats a sword, they'll get a forge and try, like me, to smelt corn their bed and board. The tools of war I taught to score, so worthy drunks have them; man can't compete with iron. Come with any sort of talents you've got. We're the nations weep, and agriculture makes them grin; no husbandman can shear his sheep with entrap or culverin. Alas for good old Tubal Cain, and all the lessons that he taught! His neighbors, who were once his friends, we've scrapped and fought. The steel that should have made a spade, if we had followed up his plan, was used to form a flashing blade, with which to carve our fellowmen. The metal that should have been used to bind the world, we've torn to pieces; a fellow from his brown chair down to where his whitebone lies. I wonder if we're wiser now, since war has bled the nations white. Shall we proceed to make a better world, and save our guns? Good night!" Or will we rest years or ten, and then get hungry for a scrap, and say, "Give me the sword again—we want to disarm the map?"

THE LITTLE SOLDIER.

They measured him and took his weight. They wrote him down as much too small. But little men have courage great. Which doctors cannot guess at all. He ought to offer them denied. Not big enough to lead," they said. And home he came to us and cried, refusing to be comforted.

Three times they offered him a place. Where all in safety he might work. Three times he said, with captured face:

"I'll be a fighter, not a clerk." At the army took him in. Both private—and he had his chance.

And there was meaning in his grin. The day he sailed away for France.

"I'll show them, some day, dad," said he. "That all their measurements are wrong.

That it is what men cannot see. That makes a fellow weak or strong.

And ninety pounds of sterling grit Are worth two hundred pounds of bluff.

I'm small but I will never quit. I'll show them that I've got the stuff."

"He was too small to lead," they said. Not large enough for shoulder straps. And the word comes that he's dead.

A smile upon his face, perhaps:

For when his officers were killed At St. Michael, that bitter day. His missing captain's place he filled. "Come on!" he cried. "I'll lead the way!"

His chums are writing home to tell How Jamie had that faltering line Into the very jaws of death. And cheered them on with courage bare.

No bars upon his coat he wore: He was too small and under weight. But now that he may fight no more, His soul is ranked among the great.

GERMAN SYMPATHY OFFENSIVE TO BE REFERRED TO FOCH

Secretary Lansing Advises German Official to Quit Wringing U. S. Alone.

PLAYING A BOLD GAME

German Statesmen Are Believed to be Actuated by Belief That There Is in America a Slumbering Feeling of Pity for Detested German People.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Dr. Self, the German foreign secretary, was invited yesterday by Secretary of State Lansing to address all communications in future to all associated powers and not to the United States individually.

The secretary's message, the text of which was not made public, acknowledges the many notes that have lately been received here from the new German government and informed that government that the notes were being transmitted to the allies.

In some quarters, Mr. Lansing's action was construed as marking a stop to the "sympathy offensive" which Germany apparently has opened on this country. Since the abdication of the Kaiser it is recalled all of her messages have been addressed to the United States government, and have studiously avoided any mention of the entente nations. In so doing, it is suggested, the new German statesmen may have been actuated by the belief that a latent sympathy exists in this country for the German people, while such sympathy does not exist in the Allied nations.

This, however, is not the case. The intentions of the United States have been clearly portrayed by President Wilson in his promise to assist Germany, providing order was maintained and also by Premier Lloyd George, who declared himself against a vengeful peace.

It must be remembered, though, it was declared in official circles, that Germany is still a bellicose and as a bellicose she can look only to Marshal Foch, the Allied generalissimo. In this connection, it was said at the State Department, the supreme war council at Versailles will be the body to decide whether or not any of the 150,000 railway cars extorted from Germany under one of the articles of the armistice may be required to her for the transportation of food.

THE PARADISE.

"THE PRICE OF A GOOD TIME"—A big production starring Mildred Harris and Kenneth Harlan, is being shown today. The story's said to be the biggest ever screen. It deals with the great temptation known to every working woman, every woman of leisure, every woman you know, whatever her age or situation in life. Here is a drama of such amazing power, such tremendous heart interest that one cannot afford to miss seeing it. Miss Harris appears as a clerk in a big department store and after trying to resist the temptations which beset her on every side, she sells herself to a young spendthrift. The production is elaborately staged and the cast, comprising Miss Harris and Mr. Harlan is one of unusual excellence. Miss Harris gives a wonderfully appealing characterization and in every moment of this masterpiece Leslie Weisiger is the truest of the very rare artists of the screen; for her perfect sympathy has endowed this mighty throbbing drama with the priceless gift of universal appeal. A selected comedy is included. Monday Violets Dame will be presented in "Flower of the Duke," a splendid Metro production.

THE SOISSON.

"THE GLORIOUS ADVENTURE" is a Goldwyn picture, with Mae Marsh, known as the girl of a thousand faces, in a fascinating role, which is being presented today. In her latest Goldwyn photoplay, Miss Marsh is seen as Carey Withersbee, a girl whose knowledge of life does not extend beyond the garden of the old southern mansion she occupies with her spinster aunt. When the latter dies, Carey, imbued with the desire to go visiting, sets out on a journey which brings her to a strange town and the home of Hiram A. Ward, owner of a large mill. In her innocence Carey does not know that she is defying convention in visiting a strange bachelor, who is at first hostile, then gently tolerant of her odd point of view. She is taken through the great mills and is shocked at the conditions under which Ward's employees work. Chawars or what she is doing, Carey goes down into the slums and distributes money broadcast. Instead of inspiring the workers they are only stirred to violence by her generosity and one night the great mills are dynamited. The climax of the picture is an unusual one. Miss Marsh is supported by Wyndham Standing, prominently identified with many notable screen productions. A selected comedy is also being shown.

THE ORPHEUM.

"THE DANGER MARK" —Aircraft Production features Elsie Ferguson. The theme deals with the trials of a young society woman of wealth who has inherited a craving for drink from a dissipated ancestor. How she overcomes this desire of tense dramatic situations all of which, aside from their interest, exert a strong heart appeal. Monday and Tuesday Mary Pickford appears in "Johanna, Enchanted." In it she makes a decided transformation—from a gassy, freckled-faced, awkward country girl to a dainty young person minus freckles and all the other marks of her uncouth "bringin' up."

Yield Quickly to Antiseptic Oil Treatment.

Many are finding relief from influenza, colds, sore throat, and perhaps preventing pneumonia, it is said, by the use of Moller's Antiseptic Oil. Apply a small quantity of oil, penetrating pain-relieving qualities assure almost instant relief when applied freely on the chest or throat with a gauze. The oil penetrates through to the air passages, making breathing more easy, relieving the pain. And for the rough a few drops on a thin sugar usually brings prompt relief. Don't fail to have a bottle of the oil. The salve comes out of it and if used according to directions results are assured or your money refunded. See, 56c and 11c at Connellsville Drug Co.—Adv.

THRILLING STORY OF THE MARNE BY CORPORAL LANDIS

Somerset Soldier Who Lost Leg Describes Effort to Rescue Comrade.

WOUNDS WERE MORTAL

Time After Time as Two Made Effort to Get Out of Firing Zone Bursting Shells Hit About Them; Landis Prays for Companion as Life Ends.

Corporal Samuel Landis of Company C, 116th Infantry, Somerset, who lost a leg in the battle of the Marne, July 15th, and who is now in New York, having been returned to this country after his injury, has written a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Landis, of Black township, Somerset county, in which he vividly portrays the thrilling events of that memorable occasion, which is recognized as the turning point in the great war. This is the first record of the wonderful achievements of Company C in that famed battle, whose actions will go down in history.

Corporal Landis says:

"Will try to write you a few lines tonight to let you know that I am all right, only I have the toothache. I received the box and the Rockwood paper yesterday and sure was glad to get them. I was certainly glad for the paper for I saw in it the letter of Captain Truxal. The chestnuts and apples sure were fine. I gave lots of them to my buddies but still have some chestnuts left."

"Monday the quarantine will be lifted, then I guess we can get out once and I am glad. I have been looking for a letter from you for the last couple days, but did not get any."

"I saw Captain Truxal the night before I got hit. He said, 'Sam, they are coming over one of these nights.' I said, 'Do you think they are?' and just laughed about it, but sure enough they did come the next morning. Their artillery opened on us about 12 o'clock that night and it lasted until 3 that morning. Then they started to cross the Marne river right in front of us, but did not get across there. The French on our left fell back, or something, and soon they were on all sides of us. We had a hard fight, but the boys fought like tigers. In my platoon Privates Paul Bills, Charles Olson, Nathan Arndt, Charles Kelley and Luther Streng were killed by the barrage of artillery fire. Of course, there were lots more wounded, among them myself, hit in the back, but it did not put me out. I got hit again by three machine gun bullets in the left leg. This happened several hours after I got the first wound. Lieutenant Schell wanted me to go back and get my wound dressed, that of the first hit, but I couldn't leave the boys. I guess I played the wise game the whole way through."

"When the Germans had me and all I am sure I would have died if they had taken me into Germany. Well, I would not have gone, that's all; there is to it. But I never once thought of going into Germany, all I could think of was how I could get away from them."

"I couk' have and would have tried to sneak off from them long before I did, but Corporal Earl Wirkie from my Company was a prisoner, too, and they had us there together, and I could not leave him because he was wounded worse than I was, but the night we got away I dragged him about 75 or 100 yards out of the shell fire. During that time he got hit again. A strange thing, we had just stopped to take a little rest for we were both so weak we could hardly hold our heads. We could only go a little ways, sometimes I bet we did not get five feet until we had to rest. Well, anyway, we were lying side by side trying to dodge the shells when one burst right over us and he got hit. A red hot piece of shell struck my helmet and glanced off and fell on my bare head. I tell you it made me scratch to get it off."

"Well, we lay there a few minutes and a big shell hit about three or four feet from my side and went into the ground, but our luck this time it did not explode. As it was it almost buried us with ground and dying stuff."

"I saw they were getting too close to stick around there, so I started again. Just at this time Earl got hit again. He said, 'Sam, we are lost. I am hit again.' But I would not give up. I told him to tough it out if he could and he said he would try. I don't see how he lived at all for his both legs were all torn to pieces. This time he was hit in the back. He was a plucky boy; he never even moaned once that I heard. We got a little farther and were pretty well out of the shell fire. We say there a little while and he said, 'Sam, I can't live much longer,' and asked me to pray for him."

"Well, mother, that was something I did not have much practice in, but I'm sure I did the best I knew how for him and I think it went to the right place, too, for he soon was unconscious and I don't think he knew very much about the pain after that."

"We were picked up soon then and taken to the hospital and he was operated on right away, but was dead when I came out of the ether. He surely was a brave boy to the end."

"Well, I guess I must close for this time."

"Your loving son, "SAM."

Lazzari Conducts Tone Test Before Audience of Five Grand Opera Stars

Of all the searching tests to which the New Edison has been subjected this was the most drastic.

Caroline Lazzari of the Chicago Opera Company possesses a contralto voice of truly wonderful quality. Remarkably flexible, it is surcharged with what is technically known as color. A colorful voice is one which has warmth and feeling—that emotional quality which can genuinely move an audience. To record a voice of this type so that no subtle shade of tone color shall be lost is the most difficult problem which confronts a phonograph.

THE drawing reproduced at the left is made from an actual photograph of Lazzari singing in direct comparison with her own voice on the New Edison. In the room at the time were five other great Edison stars: Matzenauer, De Treville, Ciccolini, Chalmers and Scott. One after another Lazzari sang the same aria she had recorded; sang them in unison with the instrument, ceasing occasionally to see if her listeners could detect when it was she they heard and when

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, tired liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

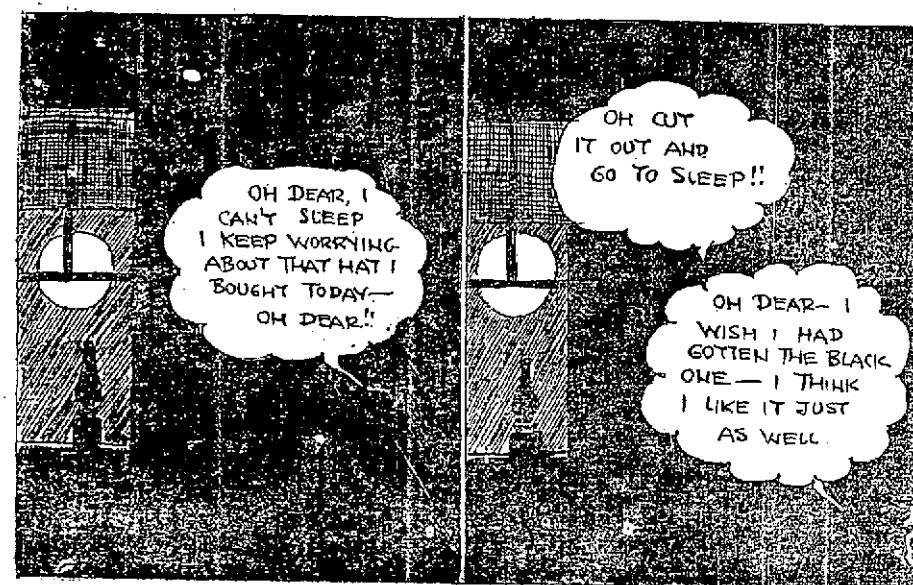

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacist; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease—Adv.
